On the contrary, as the time for speaking and writing has almost passed away, the time for constant, persistent, untiring work is now upon us. We must not suffer Virginia to stray off into the Republican party. If we do, Georgia, South Carolina, Mississippi, Louisland, Alabama, and all the other southern States will soon find springing up within their borders men who will lead the discounted in the discounted will be a substantially the same as one previously published by the citer, and then only as an advertisement. THE PUBLIC—ORNERAL EARLY'S COMMENTS on MARONE'S BIOGRAPHY.

Lynchburg, Va., October 21.—The correspondence between General Jubal A. Early and William Mahone, which occurred in 1871, the greater part of which was suppressed at the time, but retained in the custody of General Early, and subject the custody of General Early, and subject to use at his discretion, will be published to use at his discretion, will be published to use at his discretion, will be published in pamphlet form to-morrow. It makes the characters of those who were engaged with you in the defence of a just and holy cause. The result of that interview is a biography and a bitter enemy of the cause and country to which you professed devotion, you have in a carping, illiberal spirit, discussed the characters of those who were engaged with you in the defence of a just and holy cause. The result of that interview is a biography of yourself so nauseously fulsome, as far as twenty closely-printed pages. General Early begins by referring to misstatements which have provoked the publication, and to the false impressions sought to be made of yourself so nauseously fulsome, as far as you are concerned, and so utterly unjust and illiberal as regards your former comrades, that the northern publisher of it cannot withhold the expression of his disgust while he is made to swallow the pill forced on him in the fulfilment of a bargain. In all my reading of biography, from Plutarch down, I have never read the memoir of any man in any are in which he has been made to utter by Mahone papers and correspondents.

The occasion of the letters between the any age in which he has been made to utter the title of so many illiberal things about ster, who stated in a note to the memoir that it had been submitted to General Mahis contemporaries.
